

Dear Sirs,

Since 1981 the United States government has been downsizing in order to provide the taxpayer with more services for their hard earned tax dollars. And since Amateur radio is largely self-policing, I believe that it would be irresponsible to adopt any rule which would certainly add to the already over-burdened enforcement division.

I agree that some spectrum should be set aside for C.W. telegraphy. I would like to see this done within the Amateur community. This would lead to increased awareness of other specialty modes instead of more rule making. The FCC already has it's hands full with enforcement.

Sincerely,

David Calhoun KB2APE ex WB2ZJI.
